PUNGENT PARAGRAPHS.

-An Eastern paper says that a dozen girls from New Haven are taking a tramp through the Adirondack Mountains. -The young men at the seashore don't seem to be benefited by the change of air. -A Vermont woman is awful mad because she mistook a London Punch joke in an almanac for a cottage pudding recipe.

-"Promise me, dear husband," said young Mrs. Newbride, affectionately, to Charles-"promise me never, in your darkest hours, ever to commit suicide. I am told that it will vitiate your life insurance." -There is an old fellow in Hamilton County, Ohio, who is nearly a hundred and two years of age, he has been chewing tobacco for the last seventy-five years. -"Molly, I wish you would be a better girl," said an Austin father to his little daughter. "You have no idea how sorry I am that mamma has to scold you all the time." "Don't worry about it, pa," was the reply of the little angel; "I am not one of those sensitive children. Half the time I don't hear what she says."

-"No," said Fogg, "I never tip a waiter. Of course, I should like to give the fellow something; but then, you know, if I yielded to my feelings and tipped my man, I should be better served than the rest of the diners. Therefore, not to appear selfish, I refrain from tipping altogether." -"What's all this I hear about the Mother Hubbards? What are they, anyway?" "O, they are dresses that are not pleasing to the fastidious Westerners. They seem to be afraid of them." "Women wear them in the East, too, don't they?" "O, yes, they're worn all over." "Have you ever seen anything in them to be afraid of?" "Yes, my wife." -Domestic Felicity-"John, what is that peculiar smell?" The hour was late and he had just returned from the lodge. "That is the incense we use in the lodge-room, my dear." "If that's all you go to the lodge for I don't see why you can't buy a few bottles of it and keep it in the house in case of sickness." He merely remarked that he thought she was incensed enough already.

-"Do you know Mr. Duder?" asked one Newport girl of another. "I can't say that I know him, but I have met him several times." "Well, you ought to cultivate him." "Why, is he anything much?" "I don't know how he will be in the future, but now he needs cultivation about as much as any man I ever met." Then they smiled softly into each other's eyes and went their several ways.

-The leper quarter of Jerusalem is just outside of Zion Gate. We first saw a woman without any nose, who was hanging clothes upon a line in her back yard. Going a little farther we came upon sights that beggar description. Stumps of arms were held up to us, hands from which fingers were dropping away, faces wrapped about with cloths to keep the parts together. Mute appeals for charity gurgled through throats without palates.

-Jones-"Ha! ha! Life will now be worth living. I must show this item of news to my next-door neighbor. He can't fail to take the hint. The paper says some genius has invented 'noiseless violins' for practice, and they are already on the market." Smith (wearily)-"That won't help me any. I've got to have my violin broken until a greater boon appears." Jones-"Why, what could be a greater boon to humanity than noiseless musical instruments?" Smith-"Having his throbbing temples." Jones-"Noiseless babies?" Philadelphia Call.

The chill blasts of autumn moan a solemn requiem through the denuded branches of the trees. The boys no longer wash their feet in the fountain at the park; the bull-frog croaks in the Third street pond a guttural roundelay. The night watch dozes tenderly and peacefully on the pine seats, the pale moon looks down in waning splendor and sad-eyed grief upon the dangling form of the late Adolphus Augustus, while the retreating dog-star beholds with a sinister glance a bridal pair departing on an extended tour through a region of perennial ice-cream.

Modifying Nature.

Speaking of rains recalls the fact that the dry and arid regions of this country are steadily diminishing. As the cultivation of the American soil extends, the area upon which rain falls enlarges. In California, seasons of drought when wheat could not be grown were formerly frequent, but of late years there has been no failure of the small grain crops from this cause. Then the number of days in
